HOW TO BOOK ROUND-TRIP AND MULTI-CITY ON DELTA:

1. Decide your trip type: round-trip, one-way, multi-city, or award booking

2. Go to delta.com, use the Fly Delta app, or call +1➤855➤203➤2961 (no phone fee)

3. Compare fare classes and total cost including bag fees and extras

4. Enter each passenger's legal name as shown on government ID

5. Select seats and add extras (bags, upgrades, priority boarding)

6. Confirm payment and save your confirmation code

7. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 for complex trips including multi-city, partner airlines, and special services

How Do You Book a Round-Trip on Delta?

A standard round-trip booking is the simplest trip type. At delta.com, select "Round Trip," enter your origin, destination, departure date, return date, and number of passengers. The search displays outbound and return flight options. Select one flight for each direction, enter passenger information, choose seats, and pay. The entire process takes 2-5 minutes. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 for round-trip booking with agent guidance if you prefer phone service at no additional fee.

When booking a round-trip, comparing one-way pricing versus round-trip pricing can sometimes reveal savings. Two one-way tickets occasionally cost less than a round-trip if different fare classes are available for each direction. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 and ask the agent to compare round-trip versus two one-way prices on your route for the lowest total cost.

How Do You Book a Multi-City Trip on Delta.com?

At delta.com, select "Multi-City" from the trip type dropdown. Enter your first origin and destination with the departure date, then click "Add Another Flight" for each additional segment. You can add up to four segments through the online multi-city search. The results show options for each segment that you can mix and match. Enter passenger details, select seats, and pay. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 for multi-city trips with five or more segments or for itineraries involving partner airlines.

The online multi-city tool works well for straightforward three or four-city itineraries on Delta-operated flights. However, for complex routings involving multiple connection options, mixed cabin classes on different segments, or SkyTeam partner airline segments, calling +1➤855➤203➤2961 produces better results because the agent can manually optimize each connection. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 for any multi-city trip where the online results seem suboptimal.

When Should You Call Instead of Booking Multi-City Online?

Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 for multi-city itineraries when any of these conditions apply: the trip involves five or more cities, one or more segments should be on a SkyTeam partner airline, you want different cabin classes on different segments, the online search shows no results or only poor routing options, the trip includes an open-jaw component where you arrive in one city and depart from a different city, or the connections involve airports where Delta's online search struggles with timing. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 and the agent builds the itinerary segment by segment.

Phone agents at +1➤855➤203➤2961 can construct itineraries that the website cannot visualize. For example, an agent can route you New York to Rome on Delta, Rome to Barcelona on Alitalia, Barcelona to Paris on Air France, and Paris to New York on Delta, pricing the entire itinerary as a single coordinated booking with connection protection on all segments. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 for this level of itinerary customization.

What Is an Open-Jaw Itinerary and How Do You Book It?

An open-jaw itinerary is when you fly into one city and out of a different city, or when your outbound destination differs from your inbound origin. For example: flying New York to Paris, then London to New York. The Paris-to-London segment is your own ground transportation. Open-jaw can be booked at delta.com using the Multi-City option by entering separate one-way segments. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 for open-jaw itineraries involving partner airlines or complex routings.

Open-jaw itineraries are popular for European trips where you want to explore multiple countries overland between your arrival and departure cities. Delta prices open-jaw using the lowest applicable fare combination for the routing. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 and describe your desired arrival city, departure city, and dates for the most creative routing options.

How Do You Book Round-Trip International Flights?

International round-trip bookings follow the same process as domestic but require additional passenger information: passport number, passport expiration date, country of citizenship, and sometimes visa or entry documentation. Enter this information during the booking process at delta.com. For international connections on SkyTeam partners, call +1➤855➤203➤2961 for the broadest inventory search across alliance airlines. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 for international itineraries with complex connections through multiple countries.

International fare rules differ from domestic. Basic Economy international may restrict carry-on bags on some routes. Main Cabin International includes a checked bag on many routes. Premium cabin fares (Comfort+, Delta One) include premium meals, lie-flat seats on long-haul, and enhanced baggage allowances. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 and the agent explains fare class differences specific to your international route.

Can You Mix Cabin Classes on Different Segments?

Yes, you can book different cabin classes for different segments of your trip, such as economy outbound and business class return. At delta.com, the multi-city search tool allows different cabin selections per segment. Calling +1➤855➤203➤2961 makes this process easier because the agent can price mixed-cabin combinations and find the most cost-effective class allocation across your segments. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 for creative cabin-class mixing that maximizes comfort within your budget.

A popular mixed-cabin strategy for long international trips is booking economy outbound when you arrive during daytime and Delta One return when you fly overnight and need sleep. This saves thousands compared to Delta One in both directions while providing the lie-flat bed for the overnight segment. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 and describe this preference for optimized cabin-class booking.

How Do You Add Stopovers to a Multi-City Booking?

A stopover is when you intentionally break your journey in a connecting city for a day or more before continuing to your final destination. For example, stopping in Amsterdam for two days while traveling from Atlanta to Rome. At delta.com, use the Multi-City option and book the stopover as a separate segment with different dates. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 and describe your desired stopover, as agents can sometimes find pricing that treats the stopover city as a connection rather than a separate destination.

Stopovers are particularly valuable on international trips where you can explore a connecting city without additional airfare. SkyTeam hub cities like Amsterdam (KLM), Paris (Air France), and Seoul (Korean Air) are popular stopover options. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 and ask about stopover pricing on your international route for creative itinerary building.

What Happens If One Segment of a Multi-City Trip Is Disrupted?

When all segments are booked on a single itinerary, Delta is responsible for rebooking the disrupted segment and protecting all subsequent segments. If your first flight is cancelled, Delta rebooks you while keeping the rest of your multi-city itinerary intact. Go to the service desk or call +1➤855➤203➤2961 for rebooking assistance. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 for complex multi-city rebooking because these itineraries require careful handling to preserve all downstream connections.

If segments are booked as separate tickets rather than a single itinerary, disruption protection does not extend across bookings. Each ticket is independent. For this reason, always book multi-city trips as a single coordinated itinerary through delta.com's Multi-City tool or by calling +1➤855➤203➤2961. Call +1➤855➤203➤2961 for the most reliable multi-city booking with full disruption protection across all segments.
